Advancing knowledge & the arts

A Digital Anthology of Early Modern English Drama

emed.folger.edu

Discover over four hundred early modern English plays that were professionally performed in London between 1576 and 1642. Browse plays written by Shakespeare's contemporaries; explore the repertoires of London's professional companies; and download plays for reading and research.

This documentary edition has been edited to provide an accurate and transparent transcription of a single copy of the earliest surviving print edition of this play. Further material, including editorial policy and XML files of the play, is available on the EMED website. EMED texts are edited and encoded by Meaghan Brown, Michael Poston, and Elizabeth Williamson, and build on work done by the EEBO-TCP and the Shakespeare His Contemporaries project. This project is funded by a Humanities Collections and Reference Resources grant from the NEH's Division of Preservation and Access.

*STudyes haue, of this Nature, been of late
So out of fashion, so vnfollow'd; that
It is become more Iustice, to reviue
The antick follyes of the Times, then striue
To countenance wise Industrie: no want
Of Art, doth render witt, or lame, or scant,
Or slothfull, in the purchase offresh bayes;
But want of Truth in Them, who giue the prayse
To their selfe-loue, presuming to out-doe
The Writer, or (for need) the Actor's too.
But such THIS AVTHOVR'S silence best befitt's,
Who bidd's Them, be in loue, with their owne witt's:
From Him, to clearer Judgement's, wee can say,
Hee shew's a Historie, couch't in a Play:
A Historie of noble mention, knowne,
Famous, and true: most noble, 'cause our owne:
Not forg'd from Italie, from Fraunce, from Spaine,
But Chronicled at Home; as rich in strayne
Of braue Attempts, as ever, fertile Rage
In Action, could beget to grace the Stage.
Wee cannot limitt Scenes, for the whole Land
It selfe, appeard too narrow to with-stand
Competitors for Kingdomes: nor is heere
Vnnecessary mirth forc't, to indeere
A multitude; on these two, rest's the Fate
Of worthy expectation; TTVTH and STATE.*

King. STill to be haunted; still to be pursued,
Still to be frighted with false apparitions
Of pageant Majestie, and new-coynd greatnessse,
As if wee were a mockery King in state;
Onely ordaind to lauish sweat and bloud
In scorne and laughter to the ghosts of Yorke,
Is all below our merits; yet (my Lords,
My friends and Counsailers) yet we sit fast
In our owne royall birth-right; the rent face

At last both throughly Cur'd, and set in safetie;
And yet for all this glorious worke of peace

Dur: The rage of malice
Conjures fresh spirits with the spells of Yorke;
For ninetie yeares ten English Kings and Princes,
Threescore great Dukes and Earles, a thousand Lords
And valiant Knights, two hundred fiftie thousand
Of English Subiects haue in Ciuill Warres,
Beene sacrificed to an vnciuill thirst
Of discord and ambition: this hot vengeance
Of the just powers aboue, to vtter ruine
And Desolation had raign'd on, but that
Mercie did gently sheath the sword of Justice,
In lending to this bloud-shrunck Common-wealth
A new soule, new birth in your Sacred person.

Daw: Edward the fourth after a doubtfull fortune
Yeelded to nature; leaving to his sonnes
Edward and Richard, the inheritance
Of a most bloody purchase; these young Princes
Richard the Tirant their vnnaturall Vnkle
Forc'd to a violent graue, so just is Heauen.
Him hath your Majestie by your owne arme
Divinely strengthen'd, pulld from his Boares stie
And strucke the black Vsurper to a Carkasse:
Nor doth the House of Yorke decay in Honors,
Tho Lancaster doth reposesse his right.
For Edwards daughter is King Henries Queene.
A blessed Vnion, and a lasting blessing
For this poore panting Iland, if some shreds
Some vselesse remnant of the House of Yorke
Grudge not at this Content. Ox: Margaret of Burgundy
Blowes fresh Coales of Division. Sur: Painted fires
Without to heate or scortch or light to cheerish.

Daw: *Yorke*s headlesse trunck her Father, Edwards fate
Her brother King, the smothering of her Nephewes
By Tirant Gloster, brother to her nature;
Nor Glosters owne confusion, (all decrees Sacred in Heauen) Can moue this Woman-Monster,

Is figur'd on thy tongue; nor thinke wee lesse
Of anie's here, how closely wee haue hunted
This Cubb (since he vnlodg'd) from hole to hole,
Your knowledge is our Chronicle: first Ireland
The common stage of Noveltie, presented
This gewgaw to oppose vs, there the Geraldines
And Butlers once againe stood in support
Of this Colossicke statue: Charles of Fraunce
Thence call'd him into his protection;
Dissembled him the lawfull heire of England;
Yet this was all but French dissimulation,
Ayming at peace with vs, which being granted
On honorable termes on our part, suddenly
This smoake of straw was packt from Fraunce againe,
T'infest some grosser ayre; and now wee learne

Sir Talor, and a hundred English Rebells)
Thei'r all retir'd to Flaunders, to the Dam
That nurst this eager Wholpe, Margaret of Burgundie.

Of their originalls: So pasture fields
Neighbouring too neere the Ocean, are soopd vp
And knowne no more: for stood I in my first
And natvie greatnessse, if my Princely Mistresse
Voutsafd mee not her servant, 'twere as good
I were reduc'd to Clownery; to nothing
As to a throane of Wonder.

Hunt: Now by Saint Andrew
A sparke of metall, a'has a braue fire in him.
I would a had my Daughter so I knewt not.
But must not bee so, must not: — well young Lord
This will not doe yet, if the girle be headstrong
And will not harken to good Counsaile, steale her

And runne away with her, daunce galliards, doe,
And friske about the world to learne the Languages:
T'will be a thriving trade; you may set vp by't.

Dal: With pardon (noble Gourdon) this disdaine
Suites not your Daughters vertue, or my constancie.

Hunt: You are angrie — would a would beate me, I deserue it.
Daliell thy hand, w'are friends; follow thy Courtship
Take thine owne time and speake, if thou prevail'st
With passion more then I can with my Counsaile,
Shees thine, nay, shee is thine, tis a faire match
Free and allowed, Ile onely vse my tongue
Without a Fathers power, use thou thine:
Selfe doe selfe haue, no more words, winne and weare her.

Dal: You blesse mee, I am now too poore in thankes
To pay the debt I owe you.

Hunt: Nay, th'art poore enough — I loue his spirit infinitely.
Looke yee, shee comes, to her now, to her, to her.

Enter Katherine and Jane.

Kat: The King commands your presence Sir.

Hunt: The gallant — this this Lord, this
Servant (Kate) of yours, desires to be your Maister.

Kat: I acknowledge him, a worthy friend of mine.

Dal: Your humblest Creature.

Hunt: So, so, the games a foote, I'me in cold hunting,
The hare and hounds are parties.

Dal: Princely Lady, — how most vnworthy I am to employ
My services, in honour of your vertues,
How hopelesse my desires are to enjoy
Your faire opinion, and much more your loue;
Are onely matter of despaire, vnlesse
Your goodnesse giue large warrant to my boldnesse,
My feeble-wing'd ambition. Hunt: This is scurvie.

Kat: My Lord I interrupt you not. Hunt: Indeede?
Now on my life sheel Court him — nay, nay, on Sir.

Dal: After some fit disputes of your Condition,
Your highnesse and my lownesse, giv'n a licence
Which did not more embolden, then encourage
My faulting tongue. Hunt: How how? how's that?
Embolden? Encourage? I encourage yee? d'ee heare sir?
A subtil trick, a queint one, — will you heare (man)
What did I say to you, come come toth poynt.

Kate: It shall not neede my Lord.

Hunt: Then heare mee Kate:

Keepe you on that hand of her; I on this —
Thou standst betweene a Father and a Suiter,
Both striving for an interest in thy heart:
Hee Courts thee for affection, I for dutie;
Hee as a servant pleads, but by the priviledge
Of nature, tho I might Command, my care
Shall onely Counsaile what it shall not force.
Thou canst but make one choyce, the tyes of marriage
Are tenures not at will, but during life.
Consider whoes thou art, and who; a Princesse,
A Princesse of the royll bloud of Scotland.
In the full spring of youth, and fresh in beautie.
The King that sits vpon the throne is young
And yet vnmarryed, forward in attempts
On any least occasion, to endanger
His person; Wherefore Kate as I am confident
Thou dar'st not wrong thy birth and education
By yeelding to a common servile rage
Of female wantonnesse, so I am confident
Thou wilt proportion all thy thoughts to side
Thy equals, if not equall thy superiors.

In honors, but nor eminent in titles

For in a word, I giue thee freedome, take it.
If equall fates haue not ordain'd to pitch

Enter Durham, Sir Robert Clifford, and Vrswick: Lights.

Dur: You finde (Sir Robert Clifford) how securely
King Henry our great Maister, doth commit
His person to your loyaltie; you taste
His bountie and his mercy even in this;
That at a time of night so late, a place
So private as his Closet, hee is pleasead
To admit you to his favour; doe not faulter
In your Discovery, but as you covet
A liberall grace, and pardon for your follies.
So labour to deserue it, by laying open
All plotts, all persons, that contrive against it.

Vrs: Remember not the witchcraft, or the Magick,
The charmes, and incantations, which the Sorceresse
Of Burgundie hath cast vpon your reason!
Sir Robert bee your owne friend now, discharge
Your conscience freely, all of such as loue you,
Stand sureties for your honestie and truth.
Take heede you doe not dallie with the King,
He is wise as he is gentle. Cliff: I am miserable,
If Henry be not mercifull. Vrs: The King comes.

Enter King Henry.

K: H: Clifford! Cliff: Let my weake knees rot on the earth,
If I appeare as leap'rous in my treacheries,
Before your royll eyes; as to mine owne
I seeme a Monster, by my breach of truth.

K: H: Clifford stand vp, for instance of thy safetie
I offer thee my hand. Cliff. A soveraigne Balme
For my bruis'd Soule, I kisse it with a greedinesse.
Sir you are a just Master, but I —

K: H: Tell me, is every circumstance, thou hast set downe
With thine owne hand, within this paper true?
Is it a sure intelligence of all

The progresse of our enemies intents
Without corruption? Cliff: True, as I wish heaven;
Or my infected honor white againe.

K: H: Wee know all (Clifford) fully, since this meteor
This ayrie apparition first discradled
From Tournay into Portugall; and thence
Advanc'd his firie blaze for adoration
Toth superstitious Irish; since the beard
Of this wilde Comet, Conjur'd into Fraunce,
Sparkled in antick flames in Charles his Court:
But shrunke againe from thence, and hid in darknesse,
Stole into Flaunders, flourishing the ragges
Of painted power on the shore of Kent,
Whence hee was beaten backe with shame and scorne,
Contempt, and slaughter of some naked out-lawes:
But tell me, what new course now shapes Duke Perkin?

Cliff: For Ireland (mighty Henrie:) so instructed
By Stephen Frion, sometimes Secretarie
In the French tongue vnto your sacred Excellence,
But Perkins tutor now. K: H: A subtil villaine!
That Frion, Frion, — you my Lord of Durham
Knew well the man. Dur: French both in heart and actions!

K: H: Some Irish heads worke in this mine of treason;
Speake em! Cliff. Not any of the best; your fortune
Hath dulld their spleenes; never had Counterfeit
Such a confused rabble of lost Banquerouts
For Counsellors: first Heron a broken Mercer,
Then John a Water, sometimes Major of Corke,
Sketon a taylor aud a Scrivenor
Calld Astley: and what ere these list to treat of,
Perkin must harken to; but Frion, cunning
Aboue these dull capacities, still prompts him,
To flie to Scotland to young James the fourth;
And sue for ayde to him; this is the latest
Of all their resolutions. K. H. Still more Frion.
Pestilent Adder, hee will hisse out poyson
As dang'rous as infections — we must match 'em.

Remaine behinde vntold, who are they Clifford?
Name those and wee are friends, and will to rest,
Tis thy last taske. Cliff. Oh Sir, here I must breake
A most vnlawfull Oath to keepe a just one.

K. H. Well, well, be briefe, be briefe. Cliff. The first in ranck
Shall be John Ratcliffe, Lord Fitzwater, then
Sir Simon Mountford, and Sir Thomas Thwaites,
With William Dawbegney, Chessonner, Astwood,
Worsley the Deane of Paules, two other Fryars,

I shall loose credit with yee, yet this Lord,
Last nam'd, is first against you.

K. H. Vrswick the light, view well my face Sirs,
Is there blood left in it? Dur. You alter
Strangely Sir. K. H. Alter Lord Bishop?
Why Clifford stab'd mee, or I dream'd a'stabd mee.
Sirra, it is a custome with the guiltie
To thinke they set their owne staines off, by laying
Aspersions on some nobler then themselues:

Thy life againe is forfeit, I recall
My word of mercy, for I know thou dar'st
Repeate the name no more. Cliff. I dare, and once more
Vpon my knowledge, name Sir William Stanlie
Both in his counsaile, and his purse, the chiefe
Assistant, to the fain'd Duke of Yorke. Dur: Most strange!

Vrs: Most wicked! K. H. Yet againe, once more;
Cliff: Sir William Stanlie is your secret enemy,
And if time fit, will openly professe it.

The keyes and secrets of my treasurie;

Clifford to bed; you must lodge here to night,
Weel talke with you to morrow: my sad soule
Devines strange troubles. Dawb: Ho, the King, the King,
I must haue entrance. K. H. Dawbneys voyce; admit him.
What new combustions huddle next to keepe
Our eyes from rest? — the newes?

Enter Dawbney.

Daw: Ten thousand Cornish grudging to pay your Subsidies, haue gatherd a head, led by a
Blacksmith, and a Lawyer, they make for London,
And to them is joyn'd Lord Audlie, as they march,
Their number daily encreases, they are —

For honest soules through Christendome: my father
Hath a weake stomacke to the businesse (Madam)
But that the King must not be crost. Coun: A'brings
A goodly troope (they say) of gallants with him;
But very modest people, for they strive not
To fame their names too much; their god-fathers
May be beholding to them, but their fathers
Scarce owe them thankes: they are disguised Princes,
Brought vp it seemes to honest trades; no matter;
They will breake forth in season. Iane. Or breake out.
For most of em are broken by report; — The King,

Kat. Let vs obserue 'em and be silent.

Flourish.

Enter King Iames, Huntley, Crawford, and Daliell.

K. I. The right of Kings (my Lords) extends not onely
To the safe Conservation of their owne;
But also to the ayde of such Allies
As change of time, and state, hath often times
Hurld downe from carefull Crownes, to vndergoe
An exercise of sufferance in both fortunes:
So English Richard surnam'd Cor-de-lyon,
So Robert Bruce our royll Ancestor,
Forc'd by the tryall of the wrongs they felt,
Both sought, and found supplyes, from forraigne Kings
To reposesse their owne: then grudge not (Lords)

Daliell goes out, brings in Perkin at the doore where Crawford entertaines him, and from Crawford, Huntley salutes him, and presents him to the King: they embrace, Perkin in state retires some few paces backe: During which Ceremony, the Noblemen slightly salute Fryon, Heron a Mercer, Sketon a Taylor, Astley a Scrivenor, with Iohn a Watring, all Perkins followers. Salutations ended: cease Musique.

War: Most high, most mightie King! that now there stands
Before your eyes, in presence of your Peeres,
A subject of the rarest kinde of pittie
That hath in any age touchd noble hearts,
The vulgar storie of a Princes ruine,
Hath made it too apparent: EVROPE knowes,
And all the Westerne World what persecution
Hath ragd in malice, against Vs, sole heire
To the great throne, of old Plantaginetts.
How from our Nursery, wee haue beene hurried
Vnto the Sanctuarie, from the Sanctuarie
Forc'd to the Prison, from the Prison hald
By cruell hands, to the tormentors furie;
Is registred alreadie in the Volume
Of all mens tongues, whose true relation drawes
Compassion, melted into weeping eyes,
And bleeding soules: but our misfortunes since,
Haue rang'd a larger progresse through strange Lands.
Protected in our Innocence by Heaven.
Edward the Fift our brother, in his Tragedie

Quenchd their hot thirst of bloud, whose hire to murther
Paid them their wages, of despaire and horrour;
The softnesse of my childe-hood smild vpon
The roughnesse of their taske, and rob'd them farther
Of hearts to dare, or hands to execute.
Great King they spard my life, the butchers spard it;
Returnd the tyrant, my vnnaturall Vnkle,
A truth of my dispatch; I was conveyd
With secresie and speede to Tournay; fosterd
By obscure meanes, taught to vnlearne my selfe:
But as I grew in yeares, I grew in sence
Of feare, and of disdaine; feare, of the tyrant
Whose power swaide the throne then, when disdaine
Of living so vnowne, in such a servile
And abject lownesse, prompted mee to thoughts
Of recollecting who I was; I shooke off
My bondage, and made hast to let my Aunt
Of Burgundie acknowledge mee her kinsman;
Heire to the Crowne of England, snatch'd by Henry
From Richards head; a thing scarce knowne ith world.

K. I. My Lord, it stands not with your Counsaile now
To flie vpon invectiues, if you can
Make this apparent what you haue discourst
In every Circumstance, wee will not studie
An answer, but are ready in your Cause.

War: You are a wise, and just King, by the powers
Aboue, reserv'd beyond all other aydes
To plant mee in mine owne inheritance:
To marrie these two Kingdomes in a loue
Never to be divor'd, while time is time.
As for the manner first of my escape,
Of my Conveyance, next, of my life since,
The meanes, and persons, who were instruments;
Great Sir, tis fit I over-passe in silence:
Reserving the relation, to the secrecy
Of your owne Princely eare, since it concernes
Some great Ones living yet, and others dead,

Then yours of Lancaster; so Stanlie houlds:
Which if it be not treason in the highest,
Then we are traytors all; perjurd and false,
Who haue tooke oath to Henry, and the justice
Of Henries title; Oxford, Surrey, Dawbney,
With all your other Peeres of State, and Church,

To keepe my gratitude sincere and perfect?
Stanlie was once my friend, and came in time
To sauе my life; yet to say truth (my Lords,)
The man staid long enough t'indanger it:
But I could see no more into his heart,
Then what his outward actions did present;
And for 'em haue rewarded 'em so fullie,
As that there wanted nothing in our guift
To gratifie his merit, as I thought,
Vnlesse I should devide my Crowne with him,
And giue him halfe; tho now I well perceiue
Twould scarce haue seru'd his turne, without the whole.

Weare Clifford to thy graue this painted Emblem:
Water shall never wash it off, all eyes
That gaze vpon thy face, shall reade there written,
A State-Informers Character, more vglie
Stamp'd on a noble name, then on a base.
The Heavens forgiue thee; pray (my Lords) no change
Of words: this man and I haue vsd too manie.

Cliff: Shall I be disgrac'd without replie? Dur: Giue loosers
Leave to talke; his losse is irrecoverable. Stan: Once more
To all a long farewell; the best of greatnesse
Preserue the King; my next suite is (my Lords)
To be remembred to my noble Brother,
Darby my much griev'd brother; Oh! perswade him,
That I shall stand no blemish to his house,

But no Plantagenet byr Lady yet
By red Rose or by white. Warb. An Vnion this way,
Settles possession in a Monarchie
Establisht rightly, as is my inheritance:
Acknowlede me but Soveraigne of this Kingdome,
Your heart (fayre Princes) and the hand of providence,
Shall crowne you Queene of me, and my best fortunes.

Kath. Where my obedience is (my Lord) a dutie,
Loue owes true service. Warb: Shall I? — K. Ia: Cossen yes,

Enjoy her; from my hand accept your bride;
And may they liue at enmitie with comfort,
Who grieue at such an equall pledge of trothes.

Y'are the Princes wife now. Kath: By your gift Sir;

Warb: Thus I take seisure of mine owne. Kath: I misse yet
A fathers blessing: Let me finde it; — humbly

Vpon my knees I seeke it. Hunt: I am Huntley

Olde Alexander Guerdon, a plaine subject,
Nor more, nor lesse; and Ladie, if you wish for

A blessing, you must bend your knees to Heaven;
For Heaven did giue me you; alas, alas,

What would you haue me say? may all the happinesse
My prayers ever sued to fall vpon you,

Preserue you in your vertues; — preethee Daliell
Come with me; for, I feele thy griefes as full

As mine, lets steale away, and cry together.

{Exeunt Huntley
and Daliell.

Dal: My hopes are in their ruines.

K. Ia. Good kinde Huntley

Is over-joy'd, a fit solemnitie,
Shall perfite these delights: Crawford attend

Our order for the preparation.

{Exeunt, manent, Frion, Major, Astley, Heron, & Sketon.

Fri: Now worthy Gentlemen, haue I not followed
My vndertakings with successse? Heeres entrance
Into a certaintie aboue a hope.

Heron. Hopes are but hopes, I was ever confident, when I traded but in remnants, that my starres had reserv'd me to the title of a Viscount at least, honor is honor though cut out of any stuffes.

Sket: My brother Heron, hath right wisely delivered his opinion: for he that threeds his needle with the sharpe eyes of industrie, shall in time goe through-stitch, with the new suite of preferment.

Astley. Spoken to the purpose my fine witted brother Sketon, for as no Indenture, but has its counterpawne; no Noverint but his Condition, or Defeysance; so no right, but may haue claime, no claime but may haue possession, any act of Parlament to the Contrary notwithstanding.

Frion. You are all read in mysteries of State, And quicke of apprehension, deepe in judgement, Actiue in resolution; and tis pittie Such counsaile should lye buryed in obscuritie. But why in such a time and cause of triumph, Stands the judicious Major of Corke so silent? Beleeue it Sir, as ENGLISH RICHARD prospers, You must not misse imployment of high nature.

Major. If men may be credited in their mortalitie, which I dare not peremptorily averre, but they may, or not be; presumptions by this marriage are then (in sooth) of fruitfull expectation. Or else I must not justifie other mens belief, more then other should relie on mine.

Frion. Pith of experience, those that haue borne office, Weigh every word before it can drop from them; But noble Counsellers, since now the present, Requires in poynt of honor (pray mistake not) Some service to our Lord; 'tis fit the Scotts Should not ingrosse all glory to themselues, At this so grand, and eminent solemnnitie.

Sket: The Scotts? the motion is defied: I had rather, for my part, without tryall of my Countrie, suffer persecution vnder the pressing Iron of reproach: or let my skinne be pincht full of oylett holes, with the Bodkin of Derision.

Ast: I will sooner loose both my eares on the Pillorie of Forgerie.

Such a resistance, as might shew what strength
Could make; here Arrowes hayld in showers vpon vs

My Lord of Oxford with his fellow Peeres,
Invironing the hill, fell feircely on them
On the one side, I on the other, till (great Sir)

Some memorable act, I was engagd
Almost a prisoner, but was freede as soone
As sensible of daunger: now the fight
Beganne in heate, which quenched in the bloud of
Two thousand Rebells, and as many more
Reserv'd to trie your mercy, haue return'd
A victory with safetie. K: H: Haue we lost
An equall number with them? Oxf: In the totall
Scarcely foure hundred: Awdley, Flammock, Ioseph,

Raled in ropes, fit Ornaments for traytors,
Waite your determinations. K: H: Wee must pay

Here is no victorie, nor shall our people
Conceive that wee can triumph in their falles.
Alas, poore soules! Let such as are escapt
Steale to the Countrey backe without pursuite:
There's not a drop of bloud spilt, but hath drawne
As much of mine, their swords could haue wrought wonders
On their Kings part, who faintly were vnsheathe'd
Against their Prince, but wounded their owne breasts.
Lords wee are debtors to your care, our payment
Shall be both sure, and fitting your Deserts.
Dawb: Sir, will you please to see those Rebells, heads
Of this wilde Monster multitude? K: H: Deare friend,
My faithfull Dawbney, no; on them our Justice
Must frowne in terror, I will not vouchsafe
An eye of pittie to them, let false Awdley

My Daughter, no burladie, tis vnfitt.
And yet you see how I doe beare this change,
Methinkes couragiously, then shake off care
In such a time of jollitie. Dal. Alas Sir,
How can you cast a mist vpon your grieves?
Which how so ere you shadow, but present
To any judging eye, the perfect substance
Of which mine are but counterfeits. Hunt: Fo Daliell
Thou interrupts the part I beare in Musicke
To this rare bridall feast, let vs be merry;
Whilst flattering calmes secure vs against stormes,
Tempests when they begin to roare, put out
The light of peace and cloud the Sunnes bright eye
In darknesse of despayre, yet wee are safe.

The Iustice of your sorrowes, as my hopes
Can yeelde to destinie.

Hunt: Pish then I see
Thou doest not know the flexible condition
Of my ap't nature, I can laugh, laugh heartily
When the Gowt crampes my joynts, let but the stone
Stoppe in my bladder, I am streite a singing,
The Quartane feaver shrinking every limme,
Setts me a capring straite, doe but betray me
And binde me a friend ever. what I trust
The loosing of a Daughter, (though I doted
On every hayre that grew to trim her head)
Admitts not any paine like one of these.

Haue learnt experience of too ripe an age
To forfeite fit credulitie, forgiue
My rudenesse, I am bolde. Hunt: Forgiue me first
A madnesse of ambition, by example
Teach me humilitie, for patience scornes,
Lectures which Schoolemen vse to reade to boyes
Vncapable of injuries; though olde
I could grow tough in furie, and disclaime
Alleagence to my King, could fall at odds
With all my fellow Peeres, that durst not stand
Defendants 'gainst the rape done on mine honor.
But Kings are earthly gods, there is no meddling
With their annoynted bodies, for their actions,
They onely are accountable to Heaven.
Yet in the puzzle of my troubled braine
One Antidote's reserv'd against the poyson
Of my distractions, tis in thee t'apply it.

Dal: Name it, oh name it quickly Sir! Hunt: A pardon
For my most foolish sleighting thy Deserts,
I haue culd out this time to beg it, preethee
Be gentle, had I beene so, thou hadst own'd

And never childe of mine more.

How shee was handsome; young I know shee was,
Tender, and sweet in her obedience;
But lost now; what a banckrupt am I made
Of a full stocke of blessings. — must I hope

A friendship to posteritie. Hunt: Good Angells
Reward thy charitie, I haue no more
But prayers left me now. Dal: Ile lend you mirth (Sir)

Hunt: Oh harke, wee may be quiet,
The King and all the others come: a meeting
Of gawdie sights; this dayes the last of Revells;
To morrow sounds of warre; then new exchange:
Fiddles must turne to swords, vnhappie marriage!

Flourish.

Enter King Iames, Warbecke leading Katherine, Crawford, Countesse, and Jane, Huntley, and Daliell fall among them.

K: Ia: Cosen of Yorke, you and your Princely Bride,
Haue liberally enjoy'd such soft delights,
As a new married couple could fore-thinke:
Nor ha's our bountie shortned expectation;
But after all those pleasures of repose,
Or amorous safetie, wee must rowse the ease
Of dalliance, with atchievements of more glorie,
Then sloath and sleepe can furnish: yet, for farewell,
Gladly wee entertaine a truce with time,
To grace the joynt endeavours of our servants.

Warb: My Royall Cosen, in your Princely favour,
The extent of bountie hath beene so vnlimitted,
As onely an acknowledgement in words,
Would breed suspition in our state, and qualitie:
When Wee shall in the fulnesse of our fate

Sit on our owne throne; then our armes laid open

You rend the face of peace, and breake a League
With a confederate King that courts your amitie;
For whom too? for a vagabond, a straggler,
Not noted in the world by birth of name,
An obscure peasant, by the rage of Hell
Loosd from his chaynes, to set great Kings at strife.
What Nobleman? what common man of note?
What ordinary subject hath come in,
Since first you footed on our Territories,
To onely faine a wellcome? children laugh at
Your Proclamations, and the wiser pittie,
So great a Potentates abuse, by one
Who juggles meerly with the fawnes and youth

Such slaughters as the rapine of your Souldiers

So brauely, I referre me to his pleasure
Without condition; and for this deare favour,
Say (if not countermaunded) I will cease
Hostilitie, vnlesse provokt. March: This answere
Wee shall relate unpartially.

Durh: With favour,
Pray haue a little patience — Sir, you finde
By these gay-flourishes, how wearied travayle
Inclines to willing rest; heeres but a Prologue
However confidently vtterd, meant
For some ensuing Acts of peace: consider
The time of yeare, vnseasonableness of weather,
Charge, barrennesse of profite, and occasion
Presents it selfe for honorable treatie,
Which wee may make good vse of; I will backe
As sent from you, in poynt of noble gratitude
Vnto King James with these his Heralds; you
Shall shortlie heare from me (my Lord) for order
Of breathing or proceeding; and King Henrie

March: Our Dutie Noble Generall. Dur. In part

Warb: Frion, ô Frion! all my hopes of glorie
Are at a stand! the Scottish King growes dull,
Frostie and wayward, since this Spanish Agent
Hath mixt Discourses with him; they are private,
I am not cald to counsaile now; confusion
On all his craftie shrugges; I feele the fabricke

Shapt in the bowells of the earth, blow vp Workes raisd for my defence, yet can they never
Tosse into ayre the freedome of my birth,
Or disavow my bloud, Plantaginettis!
I am my Fathers sonne still; but ô Frion,
When I bring into count with my Disasters,
My Wifes compartnership, my Kates, my lifes;
Then, then, my frailtie feeles an earth-quake; mischiefe
Damb Henries plotts, I will be Englands King,

My fall in the attempt, deserv'd our Auncestors?
Frion. You grow too wilde in passion, if you will Appeare a Prince indeede, confine your will
To moderation Warb: What a saucie rudenesse
Prompts this distrust? If, if I will appeare?
Appeare, a Prince? Death throttle such deceites
Even in their birth of vtterance; cursed cozenage
Of trust? Y'ee make me mad, twere best (it seemes)
That I should turne Imposter to my selfe,

Warb. Nothing
Speake what you will; wee are not suncke so low
But your advise, may peece againe the heart
Which many cares haue broken: you were wont

Haue yee' none left now? Ile not interrupt yee'.
Good, beare with my distractions! if King James

In which be wondrous secret; I will listen
What else concernes vs here, be quicke and warie. Ex: Warbeck.

Astl: Ah sweet young Prince? Secretarie, my fellow Counsellers and I, haue consulted, and jumpe all in one opinion directly, that if this Scotch garboyles doe not fadge to our mindes, wee will pell mell runne amongst the Cornish Chaughes presently, and in a trice.

Sket: 'Tis but going to Sea, and leaping ashore, cut tenne or twelue thousand vnnecessary throats, fire seaven or eight townes, take halfe a dozen Cities, get into the Market place, crowne him RICHARD THE FOVRTH, and the businesse is finisht.

Major. I graunt yee', quoth I, so farre forth as men may doe, no more then men may doe; for it is good to consider, when consideration may be to the purpose, otherwise still you shall pardon me: Little sayd is soone amended.

Frion. Then you conclude the Cornish Action surest?

Heron. Wee doe so. And doubt not but to thriue abundantly: Ho (my Masters) had wee knowne of the Commotion when wee set sayle out of Ireland, the Land had beene ours ere this time.

Sket: Pish, pish, 'tis but forbearing being an Earle or a Duke a moneth or two longer; I say, and say it agen, if the worke goe not on apace, let me never see new fashion more, I warrant yee', I warrant yee', wee will haue it so, and so it shall be.

Ast: This is but a cold phlegmaticke Countrie, not stirring e-nough for men of spirit, giue mee the heart of England for my money.

Ske: A man may batten there in a weeke onely with hot loaues and butter, and a lustie cup of Muscadine and Sugar at breakfast, though he make never a meale all the moneth after.

Major. Surely, when I bore office, I found by experience, that to be much troublesome, was to be much wise and busie; I haue observed, how filching and bragging, has beene the best service in these last warres, and therefore conclude peremptorily on the Designe in England; If things and things may fall out; as who can tell what or how; but the end will shew it.

How windie rather smokie your assurance
Of partie shewes, wee might in vaine repeate!
But now obedience to the Mother Church,

Enter King Henrie, and Vrswicke whispering.

Oxf: The King: see a' comes smiling!

Dawb: O the game runnes smooth

On his side then beleuee it, Cards well shuffeld

And dealt with cunning, bring some gamester thrift,

But others must rise losers. K: H: The trayne takes?

Vrsw: Most prosperously. K. H. I knew it should not misse.

He fondly angles who will hurle his bayte

Into the water, 'cause the Fish at first

Playes round about the line, and dares not bite.

Lords, wee may reigne your King yet, Dawbney, Oxford,

Vrwicke, must Perkin weare the Crowne?

Dawb: A Slaue. Oxf: A Vagabond.

Vrsw: A Glow-worme. K: H: Now if Frion,

His practisd politician weare a brayne

Of prooфе, King Perkin will in progresse ride

Through all his large Dominions; let vs meete him,

And tender homage; Ha Sirs? Liegmen ought

To pay their fealtie. Dawb: Would the Rascall were

With all his rabble, within twentie miles

Of London. K: H: Farther off is neere enough

To lodge him in his home; he wager odds

Surrey and all his men are either idle,

Or hasting backe, they haue not worke (I doubt)

To keepe them busie. Dawb: 'Tis a strange conceite Sir.

K: H: Such voluntarie favours as our people

In dutie ayde vs with, wee never scatter'd

On Cobweb Parasites, or lavish't out

In ryot, or a needlessse hospitalitie:

No vndeserving favourite doth boast

His issues from our treasury; our charge

Flowes through all Europe, prooving vs but steward

Of every contribution, which provides

Against the creeping Cankar of Disturbance.

Is it not rare then, in this toyle of State

Wherein wee are imbarkt, with breach of sleepe,

Cares, and the noyse of trouble, that our mercy

Returns nor thankes, nor comfort? Still the West
Murmure and threaten innovation,
Whisper our government tyrannicall,
Denie vs what is ours, nay, spurne their liues
Of which they are but owners by our guift.
It must not be. Oxf: It must not, should not.

K: H: So then. To whom?

Enter a Post.

Post. This packett to your sacred Majestie.

K: H: Sirra attend without.

Oxf: Newes from the North, vpon my life. Daw. Wise Henry
Devines aforehand of events: with him
Attempts and execution are one act.

K: H: Vrswicke thine eare; Frion is caught, the man
Of cunning is out-reacht: wee must be safe:
Should reverend Morton our Arch-bishop moue
To a translation higher yet, I tell thee,
My Durham ownes a brayne deserues that See.
Hees nimble in his industrie, and mounting:

Thou hear'st me? Vrsw: And conceiue your Highnesse fitly:

K. H. Dawbney, and Oxford; since our Armie stands
Entire, it were a weakenesse to admit
The rust of laziness to eate amongst them:
Set forward toward Salisbury; the playnes
Are most commodious for their exercise.
Our selfe will take a Muster of them there:
And or disband them with reward, or else
Dispose as best concernes vs. Dawb: Salisbury?
Sir, all is peace at Salisbury. K: H: Deare friend —
The charge must be our owne; we would a little
Pertake the pleasure with our Subjects ease.
Shall I entreat your Loues? Oxf: command our Liues.

K: H: Y'are men know how to doe, not to forethinke:
My Bishop is a jewell try'd, and perfect;
A jewell (Lords) the Post who brought these Letters,
Must speed another to the Mayor of Exeter
Vrswicke dismiss him not. Vrs: He waites your pleasure.

Warb: After so many stormes as winde and Seas,
Haue threatned to our weather-beaten Shippes,
At last (sweet fayrest) wee are safe arriv'd
On our deare mother earth, ingratefull onely
To heaven and vs, in yeelding sustenance
To slie Vsurpers of our throne and right.
These generall acclamations, are an OMEN
Of happie processe to their welcome Lord:
They flocke in troopes, and from all parts with wings
Of dutie flie, to lay their hearts before vs,
Vnequal'd patterne of a matchlesse wife,
How fares my dearest yet? Kath: Confirm'd in health:
By which I may the better vndergoe
The roughest face of change; but I shall learne
Patience to hope, since silence courts affliction
For comforts, to this truely noble Gentleman;
Rare vnexampled patterne of a friend?
And my beloved Iane, the willing follower
Of all misfortunes. Dal: Ladie, I returne
But barren cropps, of early protestations,
Frost-bitten in the spring of fruitlesse hopes.

Iane, I waite but as the shaddow to the bodie,
For Madam without you let me be nothing.

Warb: None talke of sadness, wee are on the way
Which leades to Victorie: keepe cowards thoughts
With desperate sullennesse! the Lyon faints not
Lockt in a grate, but loose, disdaines all force
Which barres his prey; and wee are Lyon-hearted,
Or else no King of beasts. Harke how they shout.

Triumphant in our cause? bolde c[◊]
Marches on brauely, cannot quake at [◊].

Enter Sketon.

Sket. Sae King Richard the fourth, sauе thee King of hearts?
the Cornish blades are men of mettall, ha[*]le proclaimed through Bodnam and the whole Countie, my sweete Prince, Monarch of England, foure thousand tall yeomen, with bow and sword alreadie vow to liue and dye at the foote of KING RICHARD.

Enter Astley.

Astley. The Mayor our fellow Counsellor, is servant for an Emperour. Exceter is appointed for the Rend a vous and nothing wants to victory but courage, and resolution. vigillatum & datum decimo Septembris, Anno Regni Regis primo & cetera; confirmatum est. Al's cocke sure.

Warb: To Exceter, to Exceter, march on.

Commend vs to our people; wee in person

Will lend them double spirits, tell them so.

She: & Astl: King Richard, King Richard.

Warb: A thousand blessings guard our lawfull Armes!

A thousand horrors peirce our enemies soules!

Pale feare vnedge their weapons sharpest poynts,

And when they draw their arrowes to the head,

Numnesse shall strike their sinewes; such advantage

Hath Majestie in its pursuite of Iustice,

That on the proppers vp, of truths olde throne,

It both enlightens counsell, and giues heart

To execution: whiles the throates of traytors

Lye bare before our mercie. O Divinitie

Of royall birth? how it strikes dumbe the tongues

Whose prodigallitie of breath is brib'd

By traynes to greatnessse? Princes are but men,

Distinguisht in the finenesse of their frailtie.

Yet not so grosse in beautie of the minde,

For there's a fire more sacred, purifies

The drosse of mixture. Herein stands the odds

"Subjects are men, on earth Kings men and gods.

Enter Katherine, and Iane, in riding suits, with one servant.

wln 2121

Kath: IT is decreede; and wee must yeeld to fate,
Whose angry Justice though it threaten ruine,
Contempt, and povertie, is all but tryall
Of a weake womans constancie in suffering.
Here in a strangers, and an enemies Land
Forsaken, and vnfurnisht of all hopes,
(But such as waite on miserie,) I range
To meete affliction where so ere I treade.
My trayne, and pompe of servants, is reduc't
To one kinde Gentlewoman, and this groome.
Sweet Iane, now whither must wee? Iane. To your Shippes
Deare Lady: and turne home. Kath: Home! I haue none.
Flie thou to Scotland, thou hast friends will weepe
For joy to bid thee welcome; but ô Iane
My Iane, my friends are desperate of comfort
As I must be of them; the common charitie,
Good peoples almes, and prayers of the gentle
Is the revenue must support my state.
As for my natvie Countrey, since it once
Saw me a Princesse in the height of greatnesse
My birth allow'd me; here I make a vow,
Scotland shall never see me, being fallen
Or lessened in my fortunes. Never Iane;
Never to Scotland more will I returne.
Could I be Englands Queene (a glory Iane)
I never fawn'd on) yet the King who gau me,
Hath sent me with my husband from his presence:
Deliver'd vs suspected to his Nation:
Renderd vs spectacles to time, and pittie.

Kath: Not more (my Lord) then I can welcome; speake it;
The worst, the worst, I looke for. Dal. All the Cornish,
At Exceter, were by the Citizens
Repulst, encountered by the Earle of Devonshire

King Henries mercie, for to that they yeelded;
Victorios without bloudshed. Kath: O my sorrowes!
If both our liues had prou'd the sacrifice

Lasting, and vniversall. Sir, remember
There was a shooting in of light, when Richmond
(Not ayming at a crowne) retyr'd, and gladly,
For comfort, to the Duke of Britaines Court.
Richard who swayed the Scepter, was reputed
A tyrant then; yet then, a dawning glimmer'd
To some few wandring remnants, promising day
When first they ventur'd, on a frightfull shore,
At Milford Haven. Dawb: Whither speeds his boldnesse?
Checke his rude tongue (great Sir!) K: H: O let him range:
The player's on the stage still, 'tis his part;
A' does but act: what followed? Warb: Bosworth feild:
Where at an instant, to the worlds amazement,
A morne to Richmond, and a night to Richard
Appear'd at once: the tale is soone applyde:
Fate which crown'd these attempts when lest assur'd,
Might haue befriended others, like resolv'd.
K: H: A prettie gallant! thus, your Aunt of Burgundie,
Your Duchesse Aunt enform'd her Nephew; so

Into familiar Dialogue, oft rehearsed,
Till learnt by heart, 'tis now, receiv'd for truth.

Descend to these poore creatures, whose engagements
To th'bettering of their fortunes, haue incur'd
A losse of all; to them, if any charitie
Flowe from some noble Orator, in death
I owe the fee of thankfulnesse. K: H: So braue!
What a bold knaue is this? which of these Rebells
Ha's beene the Mayor of Corke? Dawb: This wise formalitie:
Kneele to the King 'ee Rascalls!

K: H: Canst thou hope,
A Pardon, where thy guilt is so apparent?

Mayor. Vnder your good favours, as men, are men, they may erre: for I confesse, respectiuely, in taking great parts, the one side prevailing, the other side must goe downe: herein the poynt is cleere, if the proverbe hold, that hanging goes by destinie, that it is to little purpose to say, this thing, or that, shall be thus, or thus;
for as the fates will haue it, so it must be, and who can helpe it.

Dawb: O block-head! thou a privie Counsellor?
Begg life, and cry aloude, Heaven sauе King Henrie.

Mayor. Every man knowes what is best, as it happens: for my owne part, I beleue it is true, if I be not deceived, that Kings must be Kings, and Subjects, Subjects. But which is which; you shall pardon me for that; whether we speake or hold our peace, all are mortall, no man knowes his end.

K: H: Wee trifle time with follyes.

Omnes. Mercie, mercie.

K: H: Vrswickē, command the Dukeling, and these fellowes,
To Digby, the Lieftenant of the Tower:
With safetie let them be convay'd to London.
It is our pleasure, no vncivill outrage,
Taunts, or abuse be suffred to their persons;
They shall meeete fayrer Law then they deserue.
Time may restore their wits, whom vaine ambition
Hath many yeares distracted. Warb: Noble thoughts
Meete freedome in captivitie; the Tower?
Our Childhoods dreadfull nursery. K: H. No more.

Vrs: Come, come, you shall haue leisure to bethinke 'ee.

Exit Vrsw: with Perkin and his.

K: H: Was ever so much impudence in forgery?
The custome sure of being stil'd a King,
Hath fastend in his thought that HE IS SVCH.
But wee shall teach the ladd, another language;
'Tis good we haue him fast. Dawb: The Hangmans physicke
Will purge this saucie humor. K: H: Very likely:
Yet, wee could, temper mercie, with extremitie,
Being not too far provok'd.

Oxf: Great Sir, be pleas'd
With your accustomed grace, to entertaine
The Princesse Katherine Gourdon. K. H: Oxford, herein
Wee must beshrew thy knowledge of our nature.
A Ladie of her birth and vertues, could not
Haue found Vs so vnfurnisht of good manners,
As not on notice given, to haue mett her
Halfe way in poynt of Loue. Excuse (fayre Cosen)

A welcome to your owne, for you shall finde Vs
But guardian to your fortune, and your honours.

Kath: My fortunes, and mine honors, are weake champions,
As both are now befriended (Sir!) however
Both bow before your clemencie. K: H: Our armes

Beautie incomparable? Here liues Majestie
At league with Loue. Kath: O Sir, I haue a husband.

K: H: Wee'le proue your father, husband, friend, and servant,
Proue what you wish to graunt vs, (Lords) be carefull
A Pattent presently be drawne, for issuing

A payre of Stocks.

Const Make roome there, keepe off I require 'ee, and none come within twelue foote of his Majesties new Stockes, vpon paine of displeasure. Bring forward the Malefactors. Friend, you must to just in the middle hole, there, that hole; keepe off, or Ile commit

'tis as it should be: put on the padlocke, and giue me the key;
off I say, keepe off.

Vrsw: Yet Warbecke cleere thy Conscience, thou hast tasted
King Henries mercie liberallie; the Law
Ha's forfeited thy life, an equall Iurie
Haue doom'd thee to the Gallowes; twise, most wickedly,
Most desperately hast thou escapt the Tower:
Inveighling to thy partie with thy witch-craft,
Young Edward, Earle of Warwicke, sonne to Clarence;
Whose head must pay the price of that attempt;
Poore Gentleman — vnhappie in his fate —
And ruin'd by thy cunning! so a Mungrell

Lamb: You would be Dicke the fourth, very likely
Your pedigree is publisht, you are knowne
For Osbecks sonne of Turney, a loose runnagate,
A Landloper: your Father was a Iewe,
Turn'd Christian merely to repayre his miseries.
Wheres now your Kingship? Warb: Bayted to my death?
Intollerable crueltie! I laugh at
The Duke of Richmonds practise on my fortunes.
Possession of a Crowne, ne're wanted Heralds.

Lamb: You will not know who I am!

Vrs: Lambert Simnell;
Your predecessor in a daungerous vproare;
But on submission, not alone receiu'd
To grace, but by the King, vouchsaft his service.

Lamb: I would be Eare of Warwicke, toyld and ruffled
Against my Maister, leapt to catch the Moone,
Vaunted my name, Plantaginet, as you doe:
An Earle forsooth! When as in truth I was,
As you are, a meere Rascall: yet, his Majestie,
(A Prince compos'd of sweetnes! Heaven protect him)
Forgaue mee all my villanies, repriv'd
The sentence of a shamefull end, admitted
My suretie of obedience to his service;
And I am now his Falkoner, liue plenteously;
Eate from the Kings purse, and enjoy the sweetnesse
Of libertie, and favour, sleepe securely:
And is not this now better, then to buffett
The Hangmans clutches? or to brave the Cordage
Of a tough halter, which will breake your necke?
So then the Gallant totters; preethee (Perkin)
Let my example leade thee, be no longer
A Counterfeite, confesse, and hope for pardon!

Warb: For pardon? hold my heartstrings, whiles contempt
Of injuries, in scorne, may bid defiance
To this base mans fowle language: thou poore vermin!
How darst thou creepe so neere mee? thou an Earle?

Into the muddie wombe that first exhal'd it.
Bread, and a slavish ease, with some assurance
From the base Beadles whipp, crownd all thy hopes.
